MARIA MORGA'S ARCHITECTURAL ILLUSTRATION STUDIO

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 21, 2010 AT 03:02PM

DC forecast

Ask any interior design student at the Corcoran College of Art + Design about "Maria's class" and you're sure to hear a mouthful. Maria Morga is a master architectural artist and illustrator and her "class" is actually two, perspective rendering and color theory, that has become a sort of rite of passage in the program. As a survivor of the rigorous courses, I can testify to the challenge, but can tell you one thing: it's worth it. She can take even the least confident drawer and transform them into exhibit-worthy contenders.

Inspiration wall and resource library

Maria's studio is located near American University and is filled with an extensive inspiration wall with a large reference library. Her portfolio is expansive as she's worked in numerous cities, including Toronto and can claim clients from Boston University to the Ritz Carlton to The University of Hawaii.
